

I'm Alessandro,

a citizen of the world with roots between Milan and the Chianti region in Tuscany, raised traveling around the world, first with my family, and later on my own for work.

Professionally shaped in the tourism industry in London and beyond, I have had the privilege of living and working across all five continents. This allowed me to meet new people, discover new cultures, and broaden my personal horizons in every direction.

My professional journey often brought me into the inner world and the heart of the kitchens of major international hotels, in close contact with renowned chefs. With great personal luck, besides tasting superb dishes in some of the best restaurants around the world, I learned secrets and techniques of the culinary craft.

From there, my passion for cooking, good food, and good wine was born.

Always curious and passionate about gastronomy, I have developed and refined my creativity in the kitchen, and whenever I cook - whether for friends or for our guests - I always strive to improve.

It is my way of living and enjoying life... I love cooking and savoring a good glass of wine!

I am not a Chef, just a simple cook like many others, who enjoys playing with pans, aprons, genuine ingredients, and a good glass of wine.

I love surprising myself and those at my table through creativity and the constant evolution of my cuisine.

My greatest fortune has been meeting Silvia, who shares my passion for good cooking... and this is where Blue Kipos 67 and our idea of an Osteria in our Venetian home in Venerato were born.
